

ECEXA NEWS September 2018

The environmental cluster ECEXA wants to achieve a new quality of cooperation of all previous stakeholders in environmental protection and especially in the area of building a modern waste management system in emerging and developing countries.

Therefore, a meeting was organized with UNIDO and Hilfswerk International and its decision-makers.

In this connection not only ecological, but increasingly also social and economic concerns in accordance with international sustainability goals should be taken into account.

Successful cooperation with many players and constant exchange leads to trusting relationships at the local level.

This can be a particularly forward-looking way to sustainably establish a close and lasting cooperation for mutual benefit.

Solutions developed in this way lead to widespread acceptance and are therefore particularly sustainable.
